The Arlo Floodlight is built around the Pro 3 camera design, a 2K camera, which is echoed in the newer Pro 4 (2K) and Ultra 2 (4K) series from the security firm. Their reputation for quality devices and neat design is well earned, not least by including a bright white LED light in many of their cameras which serve like a mini floodlight ...

It's frustrating because it worked perfectly for ages! I have ordered a new solar panel (VMA5600-20000S) to see if this will fix it. Using an outdoor cable to plug into a power point is not an option for the location. I have also noticed that my OTHER Pro 3 Floodlight with a VMA5600-10000S solar panel attached - is not charging either.

The multi-functional wire-free floodlight camera cuts through darkness with brilliant LEDs, and an integrated high resolution 2K camera allows you to clearly view live video or recorded clips directly from your phone, with an included trial of Arlo Secure.

Meet the Arlo Pro 4, Arlo's new version of its oft-recommended Pro camera that replaced the older model Pro 3. The Pro 4 doesn't need a base station to work (hooray!), but that's its only improvement over the Pro 3. So basically, if you're ready to ditch the SmartHub, this is ...

The Arlo Pro 3 Floodlight is a great security camera. The standard Pro 3 was already an awesome option for those who wanted a reliable image and high-end features, but the addition of the Floodlight makes the device even more versatile. Of course, not everyone will need the floodlight, and we still recommend the standard Pro 3 for those users.

The Arlo floodlight camera's video looks crisp and detailed, even in bright sunlight and dark shadows. Arlo says the floodlight camera records 2K video in high dynamic range (HDR), and its recordings look quite good. The video doesn't appear to actually be at a 2K resolution, but that's not surprising.
