If you think of it as 3 batteries that's $530 per battery and one would expect that they have some built in balancing and load handling that would be difficult to achieve with 3 separate batteries. The epoch 100ah 12 volt marine battery at $549 slightly less than the new SOK marine battery 100ah with similar features.

If the discount code worked on 4 of them you could get 3.5kw more for ~$800. Would add a little redundancy in case you ever had one fail (not likely). Also would allow higher discharge/charge, and lower the C rate. ... you said that the epoch batteries 4S1P for 48v "requires Battery Balancer due to series connection (Victron $53)" do you have ...

Epoch also includes a 10-segment LED battery gauge that plugs into the communication port and displays battery SOC (state of charge) in 10-percent increments. The gauge connects via the CANBus port, so if you're using CANBus communications, you won't be able to use the gauge.
